Youth Goat Camp instructors and Goat Expo staff are not responsible for your children at any time. Upon entering the Youth Goat Camps, parents and guardians agree that no one other than the parent or guardian is responsible for the child in attendance.

Each activity during the camp is available for every child that has a paid entry, to take part in. We will not exclude a child from experiencing every aspect of the camp. If there are activities, they do not want to take part in, that is okay. There are several options for the children.

Unruly children will be asked to behave by the Youth Goat Camp Instructors and Goat Expo staff. We have an expectation of consideration for others, politeness, and overall good behavior. We understand that children like to play but misbehaving and cruelty have no place at the Youth Goat Camp.

Parents may watch their child(ren) during the camp, but we ask that the parent/guardian find another activity at the grounds to remain busy. We ask this because sometimes children focus on the parent rather than the instructor during practice time. Goat Expo has a variety of activities for adults during the Youth Goat Camp each day. Check goatexpo.com for everything in the Master Schedule during the week.

Parents will have an opportunity to participate in youth activities with their child(ren) and learn more about the process of selection, preparation, and presentation in showmanship.

NO LOOSE DOGS. If the circumstances dictate that a parent must bring a family dog, the dog must be contained in a pen. Must always be on a leash, if out of the pen, and when walked, must be outside of the pavilion and not around the goats in the barn. If your goats are used to your dog, that is okay, but other goats will not be. Strange dogs could cause problems for other youth in attendance. Please be respectful and keep your dog out of sight.

Parents may not coach their kids over the rail at any time. We try to provide a real-life situation for each child. We understand that parents want to help. If a parent would like to help, we can find something for you to do. We welcome all help from parents. Please let Goat Expo staff know you'd like to help. We welcome that assistance.
